

SAY DIAZ IS GIVING WAY

RENEWED PEACE TALK AT JUAREZ SEEMS HOPEFUL.

Resignation Demand Not to Be Pressed Immediately—Orozco and His Bravos Are to Be Sent Looking for Trouble—Hibel Cash Plentiful—White Cross.

EL PASO, May 15.—"To-morrow or the day after to-morrow the matter of peace will be settled one way or the other," said Judge Francisco Carbajal to-night when he returned from an all afternoon conference with Provisional President Madero. The Federal peace envoy is now dealing directly with the revolutionary leader. By this method, it is believed, the danger of misunderstanding will be avoided.

"The Government is very well disposed to grant concessions," said the Judge, "and unless there is direct resistance regarding some unnecessary things, the negotiations will be successful. Already we have agreed on some points; others are pending. But there is no absolute disagreement and the outlook is better than ever before. Peace conditions are in better shape than they have ever been."

Everybody is in good humor in Juarez and El Paso to-night. Unless there is a slip in the machinery peace will be declared within a few hours. Information from Mexico city is that peace plans have been agreed upon and that Gen. Diaz is willing to concede fourteen governors out of twenty-seven States and four out of eight Cabinet members demanded by the insurgents. The matter of the resignation of Diaz is not to be pressed.

After the storm of Saturday, beginning with Gen. Orozco's demands on Madero and the temporary arrest of the provisional President and ending with Gen. Navarro's dramatic escape to El Paso, when the mob cried for his life, all was peaceful to-day in Juarez. Flavored only with talk of renewing the peace negotiations, the political and military atmosphere was calm. Orozco the soldier and Madero the political leader have "kissed and made up," literally hugging each other as proof.

It is announced at the insurgent capital to-night that Eduardo Hay, a graduate of Notre Dame, who was a member of the insurgent strategy board and was taken prisoner, wounded, at the battle of Casas Grandes, has escaped and is back in the insurgent lines at Guerrero. Hay is the man who ran through the streets of Casas Grandes lighting bombs from a cigar and throwing them at Federals. President Madero had contemplated trading Gen. Juan Navarro, former commander of Juarez, for Hay.

Gen. Orozco gave out a statement to-night eulogizing Madero and declaring that all is peace and harmony between them.

The question still agitating the insurgents is as to whether Gen. Rabago is coming from the south with Federals to try to retake Juarez. It is declared in Juarez that Orozco with more than 2,000 men (although the insurgents say they only had 1,200 in the Juarez assault) would march to meet the Federal forces, departing as soon as possible. Many believe that the departure of the insurgent troops is especially desired by the political leaders, who believe that military inaction caused much of the trouble of Juarez.

Insurgent officials said to-night that they had advised that Gen. Rabago returned toward Chihuahua when he heard that Juarez had surrendered and that there is no chance now of an attack. They intend to attack Chihuahua next if peace is not concluded.

Orozco himself now is eager for the march. He is happy at prospect of a fight with his ancient enemy, Rabago, who broke through his lines and relieved the city during the first attempted attack on Juarez. There were few insurgents on the streets to-day. Nearly all are occupied with selecting arms and mounting and equipping for the march which will begin to-morrow.

Orozco will be in actual charge of the movement, assisted by Lieut.-Col. Villa and other commanders. Col. Giuseppe Garibaldi has resigned from actual command of his men and there is an unexplained side of the affair. The Italian soldier, to whom Gen. Navarro surrendered, commanded 800 men who now are led by Major Raul Madero. Col. Garibaldi remains on Madero's staff and declares that he is at complete disposition of the service. He declines to comment on his resignation and his departure.

Reports from a correspondent who came in to-day along the line of the Mexican National Railway indicate that the Maderists are in great force all down the line and that Rabago's chances of coming through are small. There are 500 Maderists at Ahumada and at other points there are good forces. If Rabago does move—and no one expects he will—he may be permitted to come as far as Ahumada. He will certainly be stopped by the rebels there and in the neighborhood, as well as by reinforcements from Juarez.

Yesterday the Maderists sent down a push cart loaded with provisions from Juarez for the garrison at Ahumada on the railroad would not take the provisions needed there. The National line is to be repaired out of Juarez into the region held by the rebels. Work will begin at once, but repairs will not continue as far as Chihuahua.

Gen. Navarro, still considering himself a prisoner of war, is concealed in El Paso. Most of the officers who fled to this side are without funds, the official paymaster failing at the moment of the battle. The receipts of the custom house Saturday and Sunday, the first two days, amounted to $2,000 and to-day they were as much as the two previous days combined.

As a result the insurgents appear to have plenty of money. They all are in possession of the money paid in gold to Edgar Field of El Paso $500 for a cargo of potatoes which he shipped to Chihuahua in January. Orozco's insurgents confiscated it south of here and used it for provisions.

Madero has agreed to accept Mexican money in payment of duties in the custom house and this will relieve an embarrassing situation in El Paso, where the banks hold so much of it that they have out the price to 45 cents. None is going out and much of it has been brought in by refugees from Mexico.

The El Paso Board of Health in an official warning issued to El Pasoans today advises that there are eleven cases of typhus and two of smallpox in Juarez. The wounded in Juarez are now being cared for. The Mexican White Cross Society, formed by Miss Rosa Aramendi, Madero's granddaughter, at former Secretary of War Villa, is at the head of the new organization. She has brought thirteen nurses and doctors to Juarez.

LAREDO NERVOUS.

Whole Town Jumps When Blast Goes Off—Attack in Three Days Perhaps.

LAREDO, May 15.—When news that Madero and the Federal Government of Mexico had agreed to peace negotiations came here this afternoon the noisy and excited sympathizers in Laredo and the whispering circles across the river in Nuevo Laredo were unanimous in saying that they did not want peace and would not abide by any terms that Madero might accept.

Already the Laredo Mexicans, who practically constitute the town of Laredo, are saying that Madero is a traitor. They want no more of him. They prefer fighting men like Orozco.

The people still believe that Nuevo Laredo will be attacked and taken by the De la Santa Cruz brothers. The delay in the expected attack means nothing to them. All in good time the guns will begin to pop across the river. One day is as good as another, for the Federal Government does not dare they say attempt to send reinforcements to Gen. Estrada, the commander of the town.

No armistice that may be made between Madero and the Diaz government will be observed by the rebels in the States of Tamaulipas and Coahuila. This assumption seems to be based on perfect knowledge among the anti-Diaz agitators here of the temper of the insurgents in this territory.

Perhaps the best indication that the threatened attack upon Nuevo Laredo is not rebel moonshine came late last night. As all things here move in the habitations of mystery, so this incident. Five men in a motor car ploughed through the night to a house outside the city of Laredo on the river bank. Four of these men were officials of the United States Government.

After these four men had been for fifteen minutes in conference with two men under an eucalyptus tree in the front yard they got into the machine and came back to town and through it to the United States army post at Fort McIntosh, where Col. Glenn's headquarters are.

"The fight will come within three days," said one of the officials after the conference under the eucalyptus tree. No duty are the nerves of Laredo's revolutionists that to-day when engineers working on the new International Railroad bridge linking the two towns began to destroy the old piers with dynamite blasts there was immediate uproar. Three shots were fired in succession and on the instant looters and agitators poured out of shops and saloons and near the approach of the bridge. They let out one yell, then caught sight of the smoke of the blasts up river and the spasm dissolved as quickly as it had come.

At 10 o'clock to-night Col. Glenn had a guard of soldiers at the American end of the international bridge crossing the Rio Grande to Nuevo Laredo. At the same hour a squad of the Eight Regiment of Gen. Estrada's command blocked the Mexican entrance to the bridge. Nobody was allowed to pass either way.

This sudden move on the part of Col. Glenn created considerable excitement among the Mexican residents of Laredo when they heard it. A report immediately spread that a fight in Nuevo Laredo was to take place to-night. For three nights the bridge has been closed on the Mexican side, but no guards had been placed at the Laredo end.

REBELS GAIN THROUGH MEXICO

Many Towns Taken, Others Ready to Fall—No Advance on Juarez.

MEXICO CITY, May 15.—Rebel military successes continue throughout the republic. Tehuacan, an important town in the State of Puebla, was taken yesterday without a fight. The merchants of the place had requested that the small Federal garrison retire so as to avoid a battle, and this was acceded to. The Federals are retreating in the direction of the city of Puebla.

Silao, a city of Guanajuato, also fell into the hands of the insurgents yesterday. It is thought that the rebels have captured a passenger train from Aguas Calientes. When last heard from it was at the first station north of Silao. Immediately afterward the telegraph wire was cut.

Late advices from the State of Michoacan are that the revolt is gaining great headway there. Morelia, the State capital, has been cut off and its fate is unknown. Uruapan, the second city, and will not witness the ceremonies attending the unveiling of the Victoria memorial.

As the Kaiser's visit is a private one in connection with the unveiling of the statue there will be no public ceremonies of any kind during his stay in London.

Emperor William looks well and is distinctly stouter than when seen on his last visit here.

The gossip of the clubs and hotel lobbies of London to-night is to the effect that romance as well as family devotion may be mingled with the Kaiser's present visit. At any rate the British capital is holidaying and must have its romance. The Kaiser's daughter, the Princess Victoria Louise, has reached the marriageable age and it is being asked why the German Princess should not make an English alliance. A principal difficulty is the lack of a Prince nearly enough related to the King who is of suitable age.

A member of the Kaiser's suite told the representatives of the press to-night that the Emperor was delighted at the opportunity to visit England at this time and that he was highly gratified by the reception accorded him by the great crowds.

He said that the present visit had its origin in the request of the late King Edward that as many of Queen Victoria's descendants as possible would attend the unveiling of her memorial.

For this reason the Emperor was doubly pleased to accept the invitation of King George and show his veneration for his dead grandmother. He believes that his visit will have the happiest results on the relations of the two countries and their rulers.

KAISER CHEERED IN LONDON

AFFECTIONATELY GREETED BY HIS COUSIN, KING GEORGE.

Alexandra Avoids State Dinner and the Victoria Memorial Dedication Ceremonies To-day—Public Interested in German Princess—Bridal Gossip.

SPECIAL CABLE DISPATCH TO THE SUN. LONDON, May 15.—Emperor William of Germany, accompanied by the Kaiserin and the Princess Victoria Louise, his only daughter, arrived in London shortly after noon to-day. The members of the German imperial family are here to attend the unveiling on Tuesday of the memorial to the late Queen Victoria, the Kaiser's grandmother.

He will not be present at the crowning of his cousin, King George V., his participation in the unveiling of the Victoria memorial at the eastern approach to Buckingham Palace will make a mixup in the coronation ceremonies. His visit now is merely that of a grandson showing his devotion to the memory of his grandmother.

King George and Queen Mary, the Prince of Wales and the Duke and Duchess of Cornwall and a throng of notable persons, as well as Count Wulfe Meierheim, the German Ambassador to Great Britain, a host of British and German embassy officers and many subjects of both countries met the imperial party at the Victoria Station at 12:45 P. M. The German imperial guests and their British royal hosts greeted each other in the most affectionate manner, after which the party entered carriages and were driven to Buckingham Palace.

King George, the Kaiser and the Prince of Wales occupied the first carriage, while the women of the party drove behind in the second one. A dense crowd lined the route, which had been decorated for the occasion, and their Majesties were cordially cheered.

London's thousands gave the Kaiser and the English King an enthusiastic greeting during the twenty-two minutes occupied in the drive from Victoria station to Buckingham Palace. The time was filled with cheers for the royal English and German cousins and their consorts.

The parade was marked by sumptuousness. There were no outriders and the state landaus were drawn each by a pair of magnificent bays. The most conspicuous feature was the gorgeous scarlet liveries of the footmen on the royal carriages.

In the first landau sat the royal cousins side by side and faced by the Prince of Wales. The two monarchs wore frock coats and top hats. Immediately behind rode the Kaiserin and Queen Mary vis-a-vis. With them were the Princess Mary and the Kaiser's daughter, the Princess Victoria Louise. Following in order came the carriages containing the Cornwallis and members of the various suites. The Prince of Wales, who wore the simple uniform of an English naval cadet, seemed scared for an instant by the demonstration of enthusiasm on the part of the crowd.

The crowd showed especial interest in the Kaiser's young daughter, who had never been seen here in public before. She was dressed in a cream silk dress and wore a large picture hat.

Twenty-five visiting and British royals attended the family dinner at Buckingham Palace this evening. Queen Alexandra was not present. On the contrary, she left London this evening and will not witness the ceremonies attending the unveiling of the Victoria memorial.

As the Kaiser's visit is a private one in connection with the unveiling of the statue there will be no public ceremonies of any kind during his stay in London.

Emperor William looks well and is distinctly stouter than when seen on his last visit here.

ENTER BEY WEDS PRINCESS.

Neither Was at the Ceremony—Young Turk Rewarded Against His Will.

Special Cable Dispatch to The Sun. CONSTANTINOPLE, May 15.—Enter Bey, the Turkish Military Attaché at Berlin, upon whom a royal bride was bestowed as a reward for his services during the recent revolution here, was married to-day to the Princess Nadjil and thus becomes the Sultan's nephew-at-law. It has been erroneously reported before that the pair were wedded, but instead there have been two or three postponements. These are attributed to a reluctance on the part of both to assume the nuptial yoke. To-day's ceremony was unimposing. Neither bride nor bridegroom was present, but three witnesses for either side signed the contract on the part of the principals. The Sheikh-ul-Islam presided.

It is probable that Enter Bey will be recalled from Berlin and promoted to a place on the General Staff here, as the Sultan does not think it desirable for the Princess to live abroad.

From now on the Dramatic Club will have to find smooth faced, bright cheeked undergrads for the feminine roles. The order is resented, but the proctors are inexorable.
